THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

REVISED AND RE-ARRANGED

WITH SOME

OMISSIONS AND ADDITIONS

TO THE

TEN COMMANDMENTS OF MOSES

By NORMAN MURRAY.

I. Thou shalt not kill.

II. Thou shalt not steal.

III. Thou shalt not lie.

IV. A man shall not have more than one wife or a woman more than one husband at a time, for that is the proportion in which nature makes them.

V. A man shall not divorce the woman or the woman the man for any cause whatever, except adultery, for if a man or a woman turns out a bad bargain after marriage, those who have first cohabited have more right to put up with each others foibles than any one else.

VI. Parents provide for your children and treat them equally whether you went through a marriage ceremony nine months before their births or not.

VII. Children remember your parents and assist them if they need it.

VIII. Masters give your servants fair remuneration for fair work and don't compel them to labour more than forty-eight hours in seven days.

IX. Servants serve your masters faithfully as well in their absence as in their presence.

X. And finally let every one treat others as they would wish others to treat them in like circumstances, for this is the safest and best rule of conduct yet given to man and was recommended by all great teachers from Confucius to Christ.
